The screenshot shows the AP News homepage with a specific article highlighted. The article title is "Correction: Russia-Ukraine-War story". It was published on November 16, 2022. The text discusses an error made by AP in an earlier story about Russian missiles hitting Poland. It includes a "Click to copy" button and social sharing icons.

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — In earlier versions of a story published November 15, 2022, The Associated Press reported erroneously, based on information from a senior American intelligence official who spoke on condition of anonymity, that Russian missiles had crossed into Poland and killed two people. Subsequent reporting showed that the missiles were Russian-made and most likely fired by Ukraine in defense against a Russian attack.

AP News Fires James La Costa (Reporter)

The screenshot shows another AP News article. The title is "AP fires reporter, reviews sourcing rules after Poland error". It was written by David Bauder on November 22, 2022. The text explains that James LaPorta was dismissed for an error in a story about a missile strike in Poland. It includes a bio for David Bauder and a "Click to copy" button.

NEW YORK (AP) — The Associated Press has fired a reporter and is reviewing its standards on use of anonymous sourcing following an “egregious” error in a story about a fatal missile strike that killed two people in Poland.

The national security reporter, James LaPorta, was dismissed after being deemed primarily responsible for a Nov. 15 news bulletin that erroneously said Russian missiles had carried out the strike, according to people at the AP familiar with the decision. They asked for anonymity to talk about personnel matters and internal operations.

KIYV, Ukraine — A senior U.S. intelligence official says Russian missiles crossed into NATO member Poland, killing two people.

Polish government spokesman Piotr Mueller did not immediately confirm the information, but said top leaders were holding an emergency meeting due to a "crisis situation."

Polish media reported that two people died Tuesday afternoon after a projectile struck an area where grain was drying in Przewodów, a Polish village near the border with Ukraine.

On Tuesday, Russia pounded Ukraine's energy facilities with its biggest barrage of missiles yet, striking targets from east to west and causing widespread blackouts. A defiant President Volodymyr Zelenskyy shook his fist and declared: "We will survive everything."

US investigating reports that Russian missiles crossed into Poland, killing 2

Josh Meyer and wire reports USA TODAY Staff | ET Nov. 15, 2022

Leaders call for end of war at G-20 opening session

The Defense Department is investigating reports that Russian missiles crossed into NATO member Poland, killing two people.

The Associated Press reported the strikes Tuesday, citing a senior U.S. intelligence official who requested conditions of anonymity because of the sensitive nature of the situation, AP said.

Pentagon Press Secretary Air Force Brig. Gen. Pat Ryder declined to comment in detail about the reports, saying the Defense Department is investigating the matter and won't release details until it's complete.

Polish government spokesman Piotr Mueller did not immediately confirm the information but said top leaders were holding an emergency meeting because of a "crisis situation."

Polish media reported that two people died Tuesday afternoon after a projectile struck an area where grain was drying in Przewodów, a Polish village near the border with Ukraine.

US and NATO investigate blast in Poland that killed 2; Biden says missile unlikely to have been fired from Russia

Josh Meyer, Michael Collins, Donovan Slack, Rebecca Morin, Francesca Chambers and Jorge L. Ortiz USA TODAY Updated 10:00 a.m. ET Nov. 16, 2022

Editor's note: This page recaps the news on Ukraine and Poland from Tuesday, Nov. 15. Follow here for the latest news on the missile that hit in Poland and more from Ukraine.

A missile that landed in Poland and killed two people is unlikely to have been fired from Russia, President Joe Biden late Tuesday.

"It's unlikely [from the lines] of trajectory that it was fired from Russia," Biden said of the missile strike. But he warned that more investigation is needed.

The U.S. government and its NATO allies have been proceeding with caution amid reports that a Russian missile crossed into alliance member Poland and struck a grain facility near the border of Ukraine on Tuesday.

After the Polish Foreign Ministry identified the missile as being made in Russia, but Polish President Andrzej Duda was more measured, saying it "most probably" was Russian but that officials still can't confirm that or who fired it.

UK official says Russian missiles struck Poland

Polish government calls crisis meeting pentagon in the united states says looking into this report. for more now we want to cross over to our reporter in warsaw. what more do you know from where you are? reporter: we are having reports from polish firefighter saying that two people have died in an explosion next to the border wi ukraine, just six kilomete away from thordor. there are pictures from the site, you can see a crater under a tractor and agricultural area, so there are unconfirmed reports so far that this could've been a russian missile strike. as you mention, the polish government has not confirmed that report, but we do understand that poland's prime minister has called an emergency security council meeting. we also understand that the

this so far, and as we've been observing many rocket attacks there are concerns this could have been a russian attack. brent: what can you tell us about the emergency meeting of poland's national security council? reporter: the prime minister called this meeting, it started at 8:00 and is still going on. the polish government has only said the meeng is happening due to an extreme situation but there was no more information given. we are waiting for more information when the meeting is concluded and there is also a meeting of the polish government -- brent: we are looking at pictures of where the emergency meeting is taking place. poland has been very vocal in its support for ukraine, at the same time poland realizes it is a memb of nato. it has been an very difficult situation. this report tonight, and the possibility that this is a russian missile, what could it do to change the calculation here? reporter: poland is eight nato member and it has been a vocal suorter of ukraine. it has delivered big numbers of weapons to ukraine and has given shelter to ukrainian refugees. there are also nato troops present in polo -- in poland. any confirmation of this event today could have major repercussions for nato as a whole. brent: what about the situation

there the past nine months? how present has this potential risk been just in public among the polish people that this war could bleed over, spill over into poland? reporter: the war has been very present. polish people have been following the war very close, we've been supporting ukraine locally. polish people are aware of the fact that there is a jor conflict going on but at the same time they are keeping calm, and the polish people believe in the guarantees of nato and the defense pact, so i don't think many people fear russia despite the fact at this could've been a russian rocket. it would not come as a big surprise because few people have been thinking that it could be a possibility. brent: it's still a fluid situation, thank you very much, we are trying to get reactions or comments coming from nato. we have heard from the united states, a pentagon spokesman saying the u.s. position here is clear. take a listen >> as i mentioned, we are looking into these reports. we don't have any information to corroborate them at this time so i don't want to speculate in hypotheticals. when it comes to our security commitments in article five, we have been crystal clear that we will defend every inch of nato territory. brent: our correspondent in washington, we want remind
